way to check
references.

References are a form of risk management and a critical piece of the full picture. Let's face it: résumés and interviews are sales pitches. Candidates craft their message carefully, emphasizing only strengths and accomplishments. We all know that 85% of candidates fudge the truth a bit (or maybe a lot). Learning about a person from someone who's already worked with them can uncover misrepresentations and give you a full 360° view.

COVID-19 made it difficult to interview people face-to-face, and it's much harder to get a reliable measure of the person on Zoom. That makes reference checking doubly important. Many things you may not notice in a remote interview could be revealed when checking references.

The thing is, references have always been a pain to chase down. Reference Getter® saves your valuable time by automating the process. Simply request references from your candidate and let Reference Getter® work in the background. You can monitor the status of references in real time on your dashboard. Done.
